

Candidacy for Catalan authors

PEN Català, in collaboration with the Ramon Llull Institute and Éter editorial services, is opening a call for applications to participate in a literary residency in Catalonia, available to three young Catalan playwrights. Two years ago, PEN Català and the Ramon Llull Institute began a collaboration that resulted in the celebration of the Be Part. Grow With Arts residency for young emerging European writers and in a collective publication. Given the success of that first call, we have organised this new residency with a focus on the Arab world and specifically on Palestine literature and culture.

The residency seeks to support creative work in an interactive framework across the shores of the Mediterranean while fostering Catalan and Palestinian literature and culture. It will take place at Faber Llull d'Olot and is part of a wider programme of exchanges between Catalan and Arabic literature organised with the support of other cultural institutions.

The goal of the call is to offer a space for work, inspiration, and exchange. The residency will be organised with a double approach. The first is collective, prioritising interaction among the group of residents and facilitating meetings with various professionals in the field who will inspire and mentor. The second component will allow each resident to develop their theatrical project individually.

At the end of the residency there will be a dramatized reading and a collective digital publication that will include translations of excerpts from the works of the participating authors into Arabic and Catalan.

Who can apply?

- Catalan-language playwrights under the age of 35
- Candidates must have at least two works previously performed

Basis for evaluation:

- Literary quality of the work
- Topicality of the issues considered and innovation in language
- How the work has been received
- The interest of the project presented

Documents to present:

- Letter of motivation to participate in the residency
- CV mentioning works performed, works published, and knowledge of English language (maximum 2 pages)
- Brief description of the project to be developed (maximum 2 pages)
- An earlier work
